Project context

Climate change, environmental degradation, and sustainability challenges are among the most pressing global issues facing today's societies. Young people are increasingly exposed to complex and sometimes contradictory messages related to sustainability, often shaped by political narratives, media discourse and commercial interests.

According to the latest reports of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), the world is approaching critical ecological thresholds, with significant impacts on ecosystems, human well-being and future generations. These challenges require not only technical solutions, but also informed, critical and responsible civic engagement.

Sustainability Beyond Borders: Awareness to Action aims to empower young people to understand sustainability as a multidimensional concept, going beyond slogans and simplistic narratives, and to translate awareness into concrete actions at both the local and European levels.

Project Objectives

Understanding Sustainability Multidimensionally

Our project aims to deepen participants' awareness of sustainability, emphasising its multifaceted nature and the interconnectedness of social, environmental, and economic dimensions.

Strengthening GreenComp Competences

We will conduct workshops and case studies to enhance critical thinking and promote green competencies, equipping participants with the necessary skills for active citizenship in sustainability initiatives.

Countering Greenwashing Effectively

Participants will learn to identify greenwashing practices, developing a critical, data-driven approach to assess sustainability claims and make informed choices in their communities.

Thinking globally, acting locally

The participants will follow up locally with an event on their own initiative and capacity.
