LOCATION

Cortes de la Frontera is a traditional Andalusian white village, located between the Alcornocales Natural Park and Sierra de Grazalema Natural Park in the western reaches of Malaga province.

It sits in the mountains, overlooking the Guadiaro River, with views of the Serranía de Ronda in the background. The area is surrounded by cork oak forests, which have played an important role in the local economy since the late 17th century. Thanks to cork production, Cortes was once among the wealthiest Pueblos Blancos (white villages). Reminders of that time can still be seen in the large 18th-century houses along the main street.

Today, the village has around 4,500 residents and is located at an altitude of 623 meters.

VENUE AND ACCOMMODATION

Participants will stay at Enclave Social, a youth bungalow complex located in a peaceful natural setting.

This campsite offers a genuine outdoor experience, ideal for those who enjoy simplicity, connection with nature, and a strong community atmosphere. It's not a hotel—there are no luxury amenities—but it's perfect for participants looking for adventure and shared living.
